

SALACIA

Owen and Diana from Port Melbourne, Victoria, visited the Lightwave factory based at Coomera, and left as proud owners of a brand new Lightwave 38' sailing catamaran. 'SALACIA' will call Pier 35 in Melbourne home, but will more often than not, be found cruising the East Coast of Australia. Owen and Diana were impressed with the unique features and innovative styling of the Lightwave, and felt the 38' would best suit their cruising requirements.

'SALACIA', aptly named after King Neptune's wife, was launched earlier this year and made her maiden voyage to Melbourne where she will spend a few months before heading North again, in pursuit of the warmer weather. When asked whether they had any future sailing plans on the cards, Owen replied, 'We will be back on the Gold Coast for the Lightwave Yachts Owners Regatta, and then continue further up the East Coast for some extended cruising'. So if you're out on the water, keep a look out for 'SALACIA'.
